Betty-all-alone

Says Betty:

"I loitered for one short but exciting moment. There were gloriously dressed damsels sitting on high stools round the bar, sucking pretty-coloured liquids through straws out of long glasses; they were all showing a goodly amount of hose-tight skirts wrinkle up so nowadays—and looking like La Vie Parisienne's cartoons. One of them wore garters! I saw the flash of a diamond buckle! I thought they were out of fashion. I suppose 'their' fashions are not quite the same as other people's, though! The men were rather nice to look at, but, I should imagine, horrid to talk to; they looked so very blasé, and they all had a sort of out-all-night-washed-properly-next-day-but-nasty-taste-in-your-mouth expression."

"He took me to lunch at the Ritz. There I found the nicest-looking women I've yet seen in this country. American women when they are really, truly well dressed, are exquisite, and the Ritz bunch all had that well-groomed look that English-women have combined with the perfect-as-to-detail-ness of the Parisienne."

By MEG VILLARS

She's a bewitching, frankly self-revealing little maid from the circumscribed life of a London suburb. A quixotic adventure in search of a husband—oh, she doesn't make any bones about that—lands her in Paris. Circumstances draw her very deeply into the risque life of Bohemia. She flutters close about the fire and—why tell you the story? She does it so fascinatingly well.

Still in search of the man, she comes to America. Oh, you'll like her witty accounts of all our foibles. Fact is you'll be wishing you were the man. But—and there's another delightful part of her chronicle—she finds him, and he's just about all a fine fellow ought to be, if he measures anywhere near her estimate.

A Great Story of the European War. The Guns of Europe

By Joseph A. Altsheler

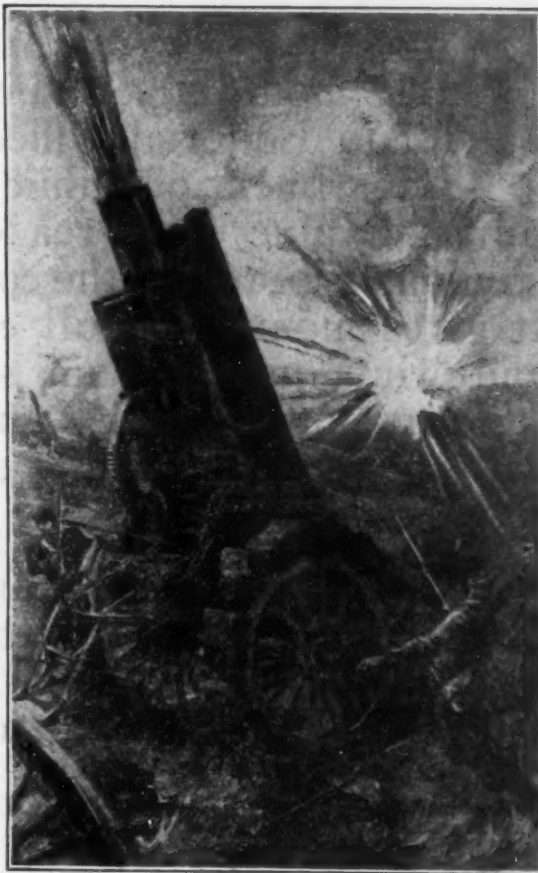

Author of "The Guns of Bull Run," "The Sword of Antietam," etc.

Here is a book you can sell to men and boys of all ages, and to women as well. Everybody is interested in the mighty conflict across the sea,—the most stupendous war in history. Everybody wants to get true pictures of the actual scenes of strife. But they can't get them from brief newspaper accounts nor do they want to read the dry theoretical books by college professors. They want color and action. "The Guns of Europe" will give them both.

"The Guns of Europe" is a thrilling war story, such as only Mr. Altsheler can write. At the same time it gives a truer and more vivid picture of the actual fighting than can be gained from any of the current "war books." The author was in Europe when the war broke out and actually witnessed much of the fighting which he so graphically describes.

The reader will follow with bated breath the daring flight of the young American traveler with a friendly aviator, the pursuit of hostile air-craft and the battle in mid-air. And he will thrill at the vivid account of the Battle of the Marne, in which the construction and action of the huge German siege guns are realistically described.

A Chronological Key to the Great War

INDEX TO DATES OF CURRENT EVENTS

THIS monthly periodical, always extremely useful to Editorial Offices, and in the Reference Department of Public Libraries, is just now of unusual value to all readers of the press who are studiously following the course of events in Europe. It gives monthly a full chronology of all events, and prints quarterly and semi-annual cumulations. It forms automatically an analytical index to the daily newspaper press—being the only publication of its kind.

The number for January is a semi-annual cumulation. It covers the events of six months (July—December) and is therefore a day-to-day index history of the war to date.

The war entries alone total nearly 3000, 35 pages of fine print; but this mass of material is carefully subdivided topically for quick reference. The events of the separate campaigns are, for instance, in consecutive order. Other subheads are "American Tourists in Europe," "High Cost of Living," "Naval Engagements," etc. The war fortunes of individual cities and individuals may be traced by copious cross references.

Special price for this Number $1.00.

Subscription Price: $4.00 per annum.

AMERICA AND THE WORLD WAR By Theodore Roosevelt

"The most important lesson for the United States to learn from the present war is the vital need that it shall at once take steps thus to prepare."

Here, in this one vigorous sentence of the Foreword, is stated the thesis of the book. Following this definite plan, he works out with careful arguments his reasons for believing that "all the actions of the ultrapacifists for a generation past, all their peace congresses and peace conventions have amounted to precisely and exactly nothing in advancing the cause of peace."

THE OLD YEAR AND THE NEW.

THERE is no blinking the fact that the year 1914 has spelled for the booktrade, as for every other line of business, serious upheaval and marked recession from the high points attained in previous years. It began hesitantly—we are speaking now for both publishers and booksellers—and on the average business showed a slight falling off from the previous year even for the first seven months.

Then came the sudden thunderclap of the great war and for a few weeks nothing in the business world, in the book trade or out of it, was predictable. As the financial skies cleared here, however, there was, as evidenced by the replies printed by the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY in its Fall Announcement issue, a renewal of optimism for the good fall and holiday book season which had been looked forward to through all the earlier months of the year.

And, considering conditions, that business has been good. Not that it was up to the mark of former years; in fact, not a single retail store of those with which the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY has got in touch since Christmas reports greater gross holiday business; but there were the best of reasons why it should not have been, and not one of these stores, on the other hand, was at all discouraged by the showing. The answer in nearly every case was: a greater number of sales, smaller individual purchases; a marked decrease in sales of rare books and expensive sets, a marked increase in the sale of the cheaper gift books, post cards, toy books, leather bound reprint series and the like. And this is obviously really a healthy development; for the rare book buyers will come back into the market as soon as the clarification in general business has proceeded a little further, and of the new book buyers brought down to books by stress of economy many will remain book buyers.

For the new year's book business you may take your choice of prophets. On the one side is foreseen a continuance of dull business so long as the war lasts and for the two or three years of world "reconstruction" thereafter. On the other side is foreseen an approaching business boom, due to the domestic reflex of our enormously increasing foreign trade, our good crops and our relatively secure and prosperous condition.

Probably the future lies somewhere between. Prediction is hazardous; but almost certainly nothing worse than 1914 lies ahead and almost certainly something better. Betterment in business during the spring will probably be slow and conservatism in buying, unless capital resources permit otherwise, would be advisable. But there will be a release of many excellent "hold-over" importations; the public is going to tire of hastily patched up war books and newspaper reading, and makers and sellers of good serious books and cheerful fiction will gain by the reaction; foreign money coming into the country is bound to make its effect felt in time; and if the first six months of 1915 show but slight betterment over 1914 the last six months are not unlikely to surprise us.

"Everything considered" the book trade bankruptcy record for the year has not been alarming. But one general book publishing house is in the bankruptcy list, the Sturgis-Walton-Eaton-Ives combination, although one publisher-bookseller in the West and one old-established book publishing house in New York City were forced to arrange for considerable extensions. There were fifty-eight retail failures during 1914 as against twenty-three last year and thirty-three the year before. Four of the fifty-eight were, however, really holdovers from 1913 and only three of the fifty-four were of importance; i.e., having liabilities reported of over $5,000. These were the Cole Book Company of Atlanta, Ga. ($31,831), R. E. Judd of Lowell, Mass. ($24,000) and the H. B. Claffin Company and affiliated corporations, the causes of the last failure, of course, like that of the Siegel concerns the year before, lying entirely outside the book-trade.

To offset the above unfavorable record there was another long list of new booksellers, the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY recording forty-eight such during the year as against forty-seven the year before. Nearly all of them, of course, were small dealers in small towns, but Thoms & Eron of New York and S. G. Manschreck of St. Joseph, Mo., deserve special mention as well as the good will of the trade. No new book publishing house entered the ranks of the trade, strictly speaking, though one, the Hearst International Library Co. began active publishing early in the year; two, the H. W. Wilson Company and Laird & Lee were reincorporated during the year, and fourteen concerns which announced "book publishing" as one of their corporate purposes started in business.

The year marked the passing, however, of two honored publishing names—familiar to the trade, the one for nearly twenty years, the other for over twice as long—in the amalgamation of Dana Estes & Company with the Page Company and the H. M. Caldwell Company with the Dodge Publishing Company. Each firm lost its identity in the transfer.

SOME BOOK TRADE CHANGES FOR THE NEW YEAR.

GEORGE W. WILSON, owing to the present unsettled condition of the map and atlas business, leaves C. S. Hammond & Co. on January 1st.

H. B. RUNYAN, manager of the book department of the Boston Store, Chicago, has resigned to accept a similar position with the R. H. White Co., Boston.

ALBAN P. ROCHE, formerly with G. W. Dillingham Co., joins the staff of the Page Company and will cover the principal Eastern cities including New York, Boston, and Philadelphia.

WM. H. KLEINTEICH, formerly with Raphael Tuck & Sons Co., and later representing McLoughlin Bros., has joined the staff of Sully & Kleinteich and will cover the Middle-West territory.

GEORGE W. KELLY, traveling salesman for the Middle West for the F. A. Stokes Co., at his request, has been given an indefinite leave of absence, during which he will reside in the country for the benefit of his health. His territory will be divided among their other salesmen.

GEORGE H. SOULE, Jr., advertising manager of the F. A. Stokes Co., has resigned to accept a position in the editorial department of The New Republic. His work in the Stokes house will be divided between the Secretary of the Company and the assistant advertising manager, Hunter Passmore.

A. L. BONNEY, for many years with the John C. Winston Co., and who represented several publishers on the Pacific Coast and elsewhere the past season, has accepted a position with The Saalfeld Publishing Co., and will travel a large section of the Central West and East instead of T. I. Harris.

TREASURY DECISION REGARDING MARKING OF BOOKS.

A DECISION of importance to all importers of books was rendered recently by the Treasury Department when, in response to a request from the Collector of Customs for the Port of New York, concerning the release of certain books which were not marked with an indication of the country of origin, it held that books must be so marked.

The department held in the earlier decisions of April 18, 1898, and of December 24, 1901, that books not marked so as to indicate the country of origin and bearing the name and address of a domestic dealer, were not prohibited importations under section 11 of the tariff act of July 24, 1897, and that as books were not usually or ordinarily marked with the name of the country of origin, they were not required to be so marked under section 8 of the same act. However, in this latest decision, the department pointed out that section 8 required only such articles to be marked as were usually or ordinarily marked, while subsection 1 of paragraph F of section 4 of the tariff act of October 3, 1913, requires all articles to be marked which are capable of being marked without injury.

Accordingly, the department holds that as books are capable of being marked without injury so as to indicate the country of origin, they should be marked irrespective of whether they bear the name and address of a domestic dealer; and books bearing the name of a foreign publisher, followed by a list of cities, are not considered by the department as legally marked to indicate the country of origin, and such books should not be released until further marked to show the country of production.

24 INTERTYPE PATENTS UPHELD.

IN an opinion filed December 29th Judge Charles M. Hough of the United States District Court declares that the International Typesetting Machine Company in making its intertype machines infringed four of the patents covering the Ottmar Mergenthaler linotype and some of the improvements to that typesetting mechanism. The court on the other hand sustains the International company in the other twenty-four allegations of infringement made against them in the patent suit brought by the Mergenthaler Linotype Company.

Herman Ridder, president of the International company, which is now in the hands of a receiver, hails the verdict of the court as a great victory for his concern. According to him, the decision permanently destroys the linotype monopoly held by the Mergenthaler company.

A man should be proud of his business, and anyone who has no business should be ashamed of the fact.—Elbert Hubbard, in the Cosmopolitan.

OUR HOSTILITY TO ART.

Every well-written novel seems immoral.
—Remy de Gourmont.

MR. EDWARD GARNETT contributes "Some Remarks on American and English Fiction" to the current issue of The Atlantic Monthly, with manifest doubts as to how his view will be received in this country. The editors, in a cautious foot-note, comments The Dial editorially in a recent issue, assure the reader that Mr. Garnett's opinions are his own, and not for a moment to be confused with theirs. It is all very curious. For there is nothing iconoclastic, nothing daring, nothing unexpected in Mr. Garnett's article. It is true that he "places" so many living writers, both English and American, that disagreement with him is bound to arise in this or that particular instance. But his main contention, which is not so much that English fiction is better than American fiction as that America is hostile to individuality, is eminently defensible. Mr. Garnett says:

"The dogma put forward under innumerable guises persistently in America, that the thinker and the literary artist must cater to the tastes, ideas, and sentiments, moral and emotional, of the great majority under pain of being ignored or ostracized, was noted by De Tocqueville three generations ago, but this dogma bred in the American bone seems to have been reinforced by the latter-day tyranny of the commercial ideal. The commercial man who says 'read this book because it is the best seller,' is seeking to hypnotize the individual's judgment and taste. If there be a noticeable dearth of originality of feeling and outlook in latter-day American fiction it must be because the individual is subjected from the start to the insistent pressure of social ideals of conformity which paralyze or crush out the finer, rarer, more sensitive individual talents. I do not say that English writers are not vexed in a minor degree by Mrs. Grundy's attempts to boycott or crush novels that offend the taste of 'the villa public,' but I believe that our social atmosphere favors the writer of true individuality."

It may be possible to argue that the English advantage in this matter is a most uncertain quantity. It was an English journalist who reminded us the other day, apropos of the public dinner given to M. Anatole France in London, that his countrymen were pleased to honor a master who wrote in French when they would unquestionably have put him in jail for indecency if he had written in English. It was the English who convicted the translator of Zola's novels, was it not? But it is no great matter whether the English are as timid about recognizing the exceptional literary artist as we are, or only less timid. There can be no doubt that no civilized nation is any more timid than we of the United States. We approach all art with a chip on the shoulder, and we call the chip our morality. Outside commercial circles our chiefest concern about a work of fiction is whether or not it is immoral.

There might be something fine, something admirably courageous, in this attitude of ours if it were really morality that we are so strenuous to defend. To be anxious about morals is to be anxious about something that men have nobly died for. But our anxiety about art is no such high matter. It is obvious to the most casual observer that when we speak of morality in connection with art we mean that which is not exceptionable to the ordinary person's view of life and conduct, and that it is not immorality to which we object but the unusual, the exceptional.

Miss Corinne Bacon, a librarian whose pamphlet on "What Makes a Novel Immoral" has enjoyed an unusual circulation, furnishes us with an illustration of this point. Miss Bacon thinks that those novels are immoral which "appeal to our lower nature," which confuse "right" and "wrong," and which are "untrue to life." As a prime example of the last class Miss Bacon cites Mrs. Olive Schreiner's "The Story of an African Farm," which is, she says, characterized by "leadens pessimism," and Mr. Hardy's "Jude the Obscure," which deals, Miss Bacon believes, with "abnormal eroticism." Such novels are untrue to "the normal life of men and women."

Putting aside the irrelevant question (if there is any question) of the value of the two novels mentioned it ought to be obvious that fiction habitually deals with the abnormal and has seldom made so much as a pretense of doing anything else. Those novelists who have so passionately defended the ordinary individual as the desirable object of the novelist's art have succeeded in convincing us only where they were able to show us how extraordinarily ignorant of the ordinary we are. Is it necessary to say that so to deal with the ordinary is only another way of achieving the extraordinary, that is to say, the abnormal?

What Miss Bacon doubtless means to say when she classifies Mrs. Schreiner's pessimism as "morbid" is that Mrs. Schreiner's pessimism is so much deeper than, or different from, her own as to be unpleasant to her. So Miss Bacon, assuming that her own degree of pessimism is the only truly life-giving and moral degree, decides that Mrs. Schreiner's novel is immoral. And yet, if Miss Bacon is right in believing herself to be healthily balanced this side of extreme pessimism what advantage would Miss Bacon derive from reading any novelist who is equally fortunate? It is plain that, so far as pessimism is concerned, only a writer possessed of considerably more than the ideal amount possessed by Miss Bacon could possibly furnish her with that spiritual adventure which it is the novelist's business to give. But Miss Bacon, discovering such a writer, rejects her novel as immoral!

The only answer to Miss Bacon's absurdities, which should not occupy us for a moment if they were not so widely held as gospel, is to repeat that a work of art, and none more obviously than the novel, is a personal confession. A novel is not an instrument by which we are to see the whole of life, or even a part of it, "as it really is." A novel is an invitation from a particular individual to look at life for a few hours through his eyes, to see in it what he sees, to feel about it what he feels. It is the very fact that his view, his confession, is his, and not ours, that makes it valuable to us. Indeed, a novel has value almost in proportion as the confessor's skill and power have enabled him to make his work the expression of his individuality. The normal, or non-individual, person does not exist. But the artist is never so much as approximately normal. Miss Bacon is perfectly right in believing that Mrs. Schreiner is an abnormal woman, though we should prefer to put it less scientifically and call her an altogether exceptional woman.

Whether the hostility to the exceptional which Mr. Garnett remarks in us, a hostility almost as great in the case of the artist as in the case of the lunatic, is a permanent attribute of our particular democratic experiment remains to be seen. But we had supposed the fact of its existence was so generally known that neither the editors of The Atlantic Monthly nor any other intelligent observers of the American scene would think of apologizing for publishing it.

THE ROMAN BOOKTRADE.

THE following instructive account of the booktrade in ancient Rome is reprinted from the Periodical, issued by the Oxford University Press:

"The Latin word for a book (liber) means 'bark,' and in Pliny's account of the origin of writing we read that palm leaves were first used as writing material, then the bark of trees, and later lead and wax. But the use of the wood more probably arises from a misunderstanding. The prevailing material in ancient times was papyrus, manufactured from the pith of the plant of that name, which grows in Egypt; and the Romans may have supposed that the rind, not the pith, was used. Papyrus was manufactured in Egypt (thin strips of pith being laid side by side in two layers, the directions of which were perpendicular, and then glued together) and exported thence in large quantities from the Alexandrian period onwards; under the empire raw material was imported into Rome, and there made into the rolls upon which books were written. . . .

"For the convenience of readers it was necessary that rolls (volumina) should be of moderate size, and though we read of monster rolls which contained the whole of Thucydides (measuring about 250 feet in length) or Homer, the usual practice was to divide the works of an author into portions ('books') of modern compass. The De Republica Atheniensium of Aristotle in the British Museum was inscribed on four rolls, the longest of which was 7 feet 2½ inches in length, and contained eleven columns. Pliny states that the maximum number of sheets gummed together to form a roll was twenty (vicenae); but this number is often exceeded in extant papyri, and 'two hundred' (ducenae) has been conjectured by Birt. From 20 to 30 feet, however, is the full size of a papyrus roll. Latin writers describe the umbilicus stick with ornamental knobs (cornua) round which the volume was rolled; but such have not been preserved, and the extant papyri generally have no rollers, except sometimes a reed or quill. The umbilicus was, in fact, the mark of an édition de luxe. The exposed edges, we are told, were smoothed with pumice and (in the finer copies) painted, and a label (index or titulus) with the name of the book was attached to the end. Valuable copies were kept in parchment cases (paenulae). Rolls were kept in boxes (capsae) or circular cases (scrinia), or they might be placed in cupboards (armaria), or again in bookcases (plutei) with pigeon-holes (feruli). In public libraries the rolls were kept in niches or cupboards in the walls.

"In Christian times the roll was gradually superseded by the codex, from which the form of the modern book is derived. In Latin this word originally signifies a pile of wooden tablets (pugillares) coated with wax, upon which accounts or memoranda were written with the stilus; they were pierced with holes and strung together. Thus a ledger was called codex accepti et expensi. Such tablets were not, however, used for transcribing literary texts, and the true 'book' was written on parchment made from skins. This material had been used from early times in the East (e. g., by the Jews and Persians), where it was never superseded by papyrus. It was perfected at Pergamon, under the rule of the Attalid kings; hence the name pergamena, which is not, however, found in extant texts until the fourth century A.D., membrana being always used. It was more permanent than papyrus, and when folded and bound made a volume far more easily handled than the roll. Notwithstanding, its use only gradually became general in the West. At first it merely took the place of waxed tablets for accounts, etc. (hence the term pugillares membranei in Martial), and it was only with the spread of Christianity that it ousted papyrus.

OBITUARY NOTES.

J. J. REDDITT, assistant steward for the past seven years of the Methodist Book and Publishing Company, Toronto, died December 19 after a long illness. Mr. Redditt who was formerly a Methodist minister was appointed to assist Dr. Briggs, the book steward, when the rapidly expanding business of the Company began to weigh heavily on the shoulders of the veteran publisher. He had a good deal to do with developing the plans of the new building now in process of erection and within the past couple of years visited many publishing establishments in the United States in search of ideas.

DANIEL PARISH, JR., a well known book collector, died in New York City on December 17th as the result of injuries sustained in a fall several days before. Mr. Parish was born in New York in 1841 and so much did he love the great city that (until recent years when failing health ordered otherwise) he even spent his summers there. He saw more than a mere fad in book gathering and as a collector of books and other literary property he was in the front rank of the men of his day and generation. His tastes as a collector were catholic in the extreme. At one time he was much interested in American poetry; at another in directories of American cities, for he realized the importance of the latter to the future historian and genealogist; and at still another period of his collecting he was interested in books which contained a list of subscribers names. History was his main field and as he was particularly interested in the slavery question and the Civil War his collection upon these subjects was unusually large and complete. Nothing of importance escaped his notice and he had a knack for picking likely new fields for collecting while other collectors were still undecided. Hence his success in obtaining many rare and important items at a cost far below the prices that they sold for a few years later. His foresight was far greater than that of most book gatherers. For many years Mr. Parish was Chairman of the Executive Committee of the New York Historical Society and most of the books he purchased he presented to that institution. No other work occupied so much of his attention, and the welfare of the Society was his constant aim. Mr. Parish was also an expert on numismatics and was at one time President of the American Numismatic Society.

LUTHER S. LIVINGSTON, for many years in charge of Dodd, Mead & Company's rare book department, more recently librarian of the Harry A. Widener Memorial Library at Harvard, and one of the foremost authorities in the country on old and rare books, died in Cambridge, Mass., on December 24th after an illness of four months. Born in Grand Rapids, Mich., forty-eight years ago, Mr. Livingston served as a bookseller's clerk in that city for six years before he came to New York in 1887. He entered the employ of Dodd, Mead & Company and, with the exception of two years the greater part of which was spent in South America collecting orchids, remained with that firm until 1910. At that time, when Dodd, Mead & Company gave up their retail store and moved into their new publishing building on Fourth Avenue, with Robert H. Dodd he formed the firm of Dodd & Livingston under which title the rare book business of Dodd, Mead & Company was continued, and he continued in this firm until last year when ill health compelled his retirement. The Grolier Club of New York published recently a monograph by Mr. Livingston on "Benjamin Franklin and His Press at Passy, France." He was for many years editor of Book Prices Current and contributed frequently to the Bookman. He is survived by his wife and a brother, Prof. Bert Livingston of Johns Hopkins University.

JOHN MUIR, the naturalist, died in Los Angeles on December 24th after a brief attack of pneumonia. Born in Scotland 76 years ago, Mr. Muir came to this country as a boy, where he worked his way in the University of Wisconsin until an injury to one eye caused him to give up his studies. Carrying the New Testament, Burns' poems and "Paradise Lost" in a pack on his back, he then set off on a long tramp, in the course of which he finally reached California. Here he struck at once for the Sierras, in which tremendous neighborhood he dwelt until his death, with the exception of various trips of study and exploration through the Western states and Alaska and in other countries. A life-long laborer for forest preservation, Mr. Muir was influential in the establishment of our national parks and reservations. He received honorary degrees from several universities and he was offered a professorship in more than one Eastern institution but steadfastly refused to leave the Yosemite. He was a member of the American Academy of Arts and Letters, the Washington Academy of Sciences, the Sierras Club, the American Alpine Club and a fellow of the American Association for the Advancement of Science. In addition to editing Picturesque California and contributing some hundred and fifty articles to various periodicals and magazines, Mr. Muir wrote the following books: "The Mountains of California," 1894; "Our National Parks," 1901; "Stickeen, the Story of a Dog," 1909; "My First Summer in the Sierras," 1911; "The Yosemite," 1912, and "Story of My Boyhood and Youth," 1913.

York when about sixteen years old. He became associated with Dr. Muhlenberg, an educator and the founder of St. Luke's Hospital. Mr. Whittaker was in the church book publishing business for more than fifty years, first with the Evangelical Knowledge Society and since 1874 for himself.

His establishment in the Bible House, at the corner of Ninth Street and Fourth Avenue, was widely known. He resisted every temptation to follow the uptown trend of trade which set in early in the nineties, holding fast with a sentimental attachment to the old place in which he started in business.

During the period from 1875 to 1900 his business both in publishing and retailing was known to be extensive and very profitable but the tide set against him during the years that followed until last spring when he and his associates decided to liquidate.

He was the publisher of "Whittaker's Churchman's Almanac," "The Parish Visitor" and many theological works by clergymen prominent in the American and English Episcopal Churches. At the time of his death he was one of the managers of the American Bible Society and was treasurer of the Church Congress. He was a member of the New York Historical Society, the American Numismatic and Archæological Society, and the Genealogical and Biographical Society. He leaves a wife and a son, Thomas Shirley Whittaker.

BERTRAM DOBELL, well-known antiquarian bookseller, poet, and man of letters, died at his home in London on December 14th in his seventy-third year. Mr. Dobell was a bookman of the old school for he not only sold books but loved and read and collected them, and his two shops in the Charing Cross Road are known to every buyer of rare books. He was born in Sussex in 1842, and in early life came to North London, where he commenced business life under great difficulties. Till he was about thirty he was an assistant to a Kentish Town shopkeeper, and then, having managed to save a ten pound note, he started business on his own account. In 1875 he issued his first catalogue, and in time became known to book collectors as a man who knew much more about the literary value of the books he handled than the ordinary bookseller. By much effort he succeeded in forcing his way into what is virtually a close corporation, and established for himself a leading position in the salesrooms among the buyers. As a bookseller, Mr. Dobell was a very energetic defender of the rights of the trade, and some years since, when the London County Council attempted to prevent the booksellers in Charing Cross Road from exposing their wares outside their shops, Mr. Dobell fought the matter in the courts and won his case for the booksellers.

One volume alone, his "Catalogue of Privately Printed Books," with its two thousand separate items, would have made the reputation of any bibliographer. Yet even more noteworthy than his services as bookseller and as bibliographer was his service to the cause of good literature. It was mainly owing to him that the poetical merits of James Thomson were recognized. He himself said, "Whatever I have accomplished, there is nothing I am more proud of than that I was able to befriend during his lifetime the unfortunate author of 'The City of Dreadful Night.'" He collected, edited and published, when his means allowed him, all that his friend had written, and it is mainly due to Mr. Dobell that Thomson's rank among the poets of his time is now fully assured. Another poet who is under equal, perhaps greater, obligation to Mr. Dobell is Thomas Traherne. The latter's manuscripts some years since came into the hands of the late Dr. Grosart, who came to the opinion that they were the work of Henry Vaughan. It was Mr. Dobell, however, who discovered the real author, and in 1893 he published the poems with an introduction, and Traherne has now at last come into his own. Several years later Mr. Dobell edited and published the poetical works of William Strode, a poet who, well known in the seventeenth century, had become forgotten. He also discovered three manuscript copies of Sidney's "Arcadia." Mr. Dobell's publications include the following: "A Voice from the Nile, and other Poems," by James Thomson, with a memoir of the author by Bertram Dobell, 1884. "Shelley: A Poem. With other Writings relating to Shelley," by James Thomson; to which is added an essay on the poems of William Blake by the same author, 1884. "Alastor; or, The Spirit of Solitude, and other Poems," by Percy Bysshe Shelley; a facsimile reprint of the original edition first published in 1816, 1885. "The Wandering Jew: A Poem," by Percy Bysshe Shelley; edited by Bertram Dobell, 1887. "The Poetical Works of James Thomson," edited by Bertram Dobell, with a memoir of the author in two volumes, 1895. "Biographical and Critical Studies," by James Thomson, 1896. "The City of Dreadful Night, and other Poems, Being a Selection from the Poetical Works of James Thomson," 1899. "Rosemary and Pansies," by Bertram Dobell, 1901. "A Prospect of Society," by Oliver Goldsmith; edited by Bertram Dobell. "Side-lights on Charles Lamb," by Bertram Dobell, 1903. "The Poetical Works of Thomas Traherne," edited by Bertram Dobell, with a memoir of the author, 1903. "Essays, Dialogues, and Thoughts of Giacomo Leopardi," translated by James Thomson, edited by Bertram Dobell. "Catalogue of Books Printed for Private Circulation; collected by Bertram Dobell and now described and annotated by him," 1906. "The Poetical Works of William Strode," edited by Bertram Dobell, with a memoir of the author. 1907. "The Partial Law, A Tragi-Comedy, by an unknown author," edited by Bertram Dobell, 1908. "Centuries of Meditations," by Thomas Traherne, edited by Bertram Dobell, 1908. "A Century of Sonnets," by Bertram Dobell. "The City of Dreadful Night and other Poems," by James Thomson. It is understood that Mr. Dobell's business in Charing Cross Road will be carried on by his sons, Percy and Arthur Dobell.

GIVE the workman time to do a good job by daylight. Get the job moving as soon as you can. Get the type set as soon as you can. Get the proofs back to the printer as soon as you can.

Don't hold on to the proof until the day before the job is wanted, for only a part of the work is done when you see the proofs—sometimes the smallest part.

If you want to see how the job looks in colors, go over to the printing office and have the printer show you press proofs. Don't have the printer hold an expensive press and employee while the proof is sent.

In printing, haste usually makes smeared copies, smudgy-looking cuts with no make-ready, dead colors that don't have time to dry before handling; and, last but not least, it makes poor printing, and poor printing is dear at any price.

What is the use of calling upon the best of your own experience and knowledge in order to develop a good advertising idea, only to clothe that idea in the shabby garments of bad printing—bad because you often fail to give the printer a chance?—Printer's Ink.

THOMAS THOMPSON of Davenport, Iowa, has retired from the book business after a record of fifty years activity. He has taken the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, he tells us, "since the first number was issued forty-two years ago."

A SPECIAL SALES field for Indiana booksellers is furnished through the adoption by the Indiana Teachers' Reading Circle Board of certain books for reading by the teachers of the State. Prof. Roland Usher's "The Rise of the American People," published in April, 1914, by the Century Co., has just been recommended by this board.

A VOLUME OF RECENTLY DISCOVERED POEMS by Robert Browning and Elizabeth Barrett Browning—twenty-nine poems from the pen of the former and six by Mrs. Browning—will be published by the Macmillan Co. during the first half of January. Early in the month will also appear "Mrs. Martin's Man," a novel of home life in Ireland, by St. John G. Ervine; "Education Through Play," by H. S. Curtis; and "Health Habits" and "Health and Cleanliness," by M. V. O'Shea.

TO PROMOTE THE FOREIGN COMMERCE of the United States the Department of Commerce is starting to-day the Daily Commercial Report in which will be published all important commercial cablegrams received from Consuls throughout the world, brief abstracts of the findings of investigators of the department in many lines of American enterprise, as well as the gist of the business of the Department of Commerce for the preceding day. The new publication will supplant the Daily Consular Report.

EARLY IN JANUARY Stokes will publish "What Women Want," by Beatrice Forbes-Robertson Hale; "The Good Shepherd," by John Roland; and "School Hygiene," by Leo Burgerstein, a German authority. To the writing of her "interpretation of the feminist movement," Mrs. Hale brings a varied experience on the stage, on the lecture platform, and as a wife and mother in the home. "John Roland" is a pseudonym; the real author of "The Good Shepherd" is an American surgeon. The story deals with a physician, self-exiled in a little valley in the Tyrol because of a blot on his past, who, in healing others, heals himself.

MAYBE BETTY HAD READ "Man and Superman"—at any rate she set out in true "Shavian" style to find the man without waiting for him to find her. Betty had always lived in a very proper London suburb and her man-hunt led her to Paris and later to America where she fluttered with the giddiest of the butterflies. In "Betty-all-alone" she describes from her London point of view the people she met and the things she did in the course of her search. Oh, she found the man all right, too. "Betty-all-alone" was written by Meg Villars and is published by Edward J. Clode.

"THE GUNS OF EUROPE" by Joseph A. Altsheler—published by Appleton—is a war story by a man who was actually at the front and witnessed much of the fighting of the earlier days of the war. He recounts vividly the battle of the Marne and the action of the huge German siege guns. The young American hero of the story takes part in a daring battle in the air and in many other realistic adventures. Appleton will follow this book with two more war stories by Mr. Altsheler—"The Hosts of the Air" and "The Forest of Swords."

THE JANUARY LIST OF THE PUTNAMs includes: "My Heart's Right There," Florence L. Barclay's little story of the war which will appear by the middle of the month; "Field Book of Trees and Shrubs," by F. Schuyler Mathews, an untechnical description, with illustrations, of all the common trees and shrubs of the United States; "The Principles and Practice of Landscape Gardening," in which Samuel Parsons sets forth the underlying principles of landscape gardening, citing passages from at least one hundred well-recognized authorities in various ages and countries; and an edition for English-speaking readers of "Christianity as Mystical Fact," by Rudolf Steiner.

THE STOCK in a retail stationery store, warns The American Stationer, should be carefully watched. As soon as a line begins to drag it should be moved to the front and given prominence. Profits are made by the turnover. One way to move stickers is to give them prominence in your window and interior displays. The right kind of displays sell the goods. The smallest stationery store can increase sales by tidying up the store. The most up-to-date line looks like a last year's bird nest in an ill-kept store. Get rid of slow movers. Old stock-worn goods will accumulate unless you make an effort to move them. Goods must be sold, and a stationer's success is dependent on the brain and energy that he puts into the business. Get your clerks interested in a clean stock and a clean store.

THE SECOND PART of the library of the late Adrian H. Joline, to be disposed of by the Anderson Auction Co. on Jan. 18, 19, 20, 21 and 22, contains a number of interesting letters and documents. The list includes: a letter of Marie de Medici, dated 1610; a letter of Catherine de Medici, wife of Henry II of France; a document signed twice by Marie Antoinette; a letter of Louis XI, dated 1483; an official letter of Louis XII; a document signed by Louis XIII; a lettre de cachet signed by Louis XIV and countersigned by the great Colbert; a military commission signed by Louis XV; a letter of Anne of Austria, wife of Louis XIII; letters of Charles VI, VII, and X; a letter signed by Francis I of France; an autograph of Comtesse Du Barry. The sale will also include several items relating to Lord Byron, including an extra-illustrated copy of the New York 1865 limited edition of "English Bards and Scotch Reviewers."

CHARLES SCRIBNER'S SONS published, on December 30, a neat edition of Sir J. M. Barrie's new war play, "Der Tag." The little play, which consists largely of a dialogue between the German Emperor and a Spirit of Culture, was produced in London on December 12 before an enthusiastic audience. The middle of this month the Scribners will put forth a volume of importance to students of contemporary literature and drama, the authorized translation of three plays by Leonid Andreyeff, the most widely known of living Russian dramatists. These plays, "The Life of Man," "The Sabine Women," and "The Black Maskers," are the ones which have made Andreyeff's reputation abroad. About January 10 will appear "America and the World War," a publication in a revised and permanent form of Theodore Roosevelt's recent articles on "America's Lessons from the World War." In this two-hundred-page volume, Colonel Roosevelt discounts the pleas of the ultra-pacifists and urges that the United States "take the position of the just man armed."

ARNOLD BENNETT, in "The Author's Craft," which has just been published by the George H. Doran Company, takes a fling at the idea, often advanced in late years, that it is easier to write a novel than a play. Mr. Bennett thinks otherwise. "One reason," he says, "why a play is easier to write than a novel is that a play is shorter than a novel. On the average, one may say that it takes six plays to make the matter of a novel. Other things being equal, a short work of art presents fewer difficulties than a longer one. The contrary is held true by the majority, but, then, the majority, having never attempted to produce a long work of art, are unqualified to offer an opinion. It is said that the most difficult form of poetry is the sonnet. But the most difficult form of poetry is the epic. The proof that the sonnet is the most difficult form is alleged to be in the fewness of perfect sonnets. There are, however, far more perfect sonnets than perfect epics. A perfect sonnet may be a heavenly accident. But such accidents can never happen to writers of epics. Some years ago we had an enormous palaver about the 'art of the short story,' which numerous persons who had omitted to write novels pronounced to be more difficult than the novel. But the fact remains that there are scores of perfect short stories, whereas it is doubtful whether anybody but Turgenev ever did write a perfect novel. A short form is easier to manipulate than a long form, because its construction is less complicated, because the balance of its proportions can be more easily corrected by means of a rapid survey, because it is lawful and even necessary in it to leave undone many things which are very hard to do, and because the emotional strain is less prolonged."

THERE is a proprietor of a shop in the city, a man of most excitable temperament, who is forever scolding his clerks for their indifference in the matter of possible sales.

One day, hearing a clerk say to a customer, "No, we have not had any for a long time," the proprietor, unable to countenance such an admission, began to work himself into the usual rage. Fixing a glassy eye on his clerk, he said to his customer:

"We have plenty in reserve, ma'am; plenty downstairs."

Whereupon the customer looked dazed; and then to the amazement of the proprietor burst into hysterical laughter and quit the shop.

"What did she say to you?" demanded the proprietor of the clerk.

New York City

WE have been in business for upwards of 125 years and until within comparatively recent years have confined ourselves to the production of our own requirements.

We have at the present time an organization in the Printing and Bookbinding business second to none. Our staff of proof readers is one of the best in the country.

On account of certain recent readjustments, we now have capacity for doing an additional amount of Printing and Binding.

We can execute all kinds of work in the Printing and Bookbinding line from an ordinary pamphlet to the very highest grade of commercial Cloth and Leather Binding. We cater for high-grade work only; our prices, however, are very conservative.

Among some of the accounts on our books are the following to whom we refer for reference:

Oxford University Press, American Branch
International Textbook Co., Scranton, Pa.
Encyclopaedia Britannica
Doubleday, Page & Company
Presbyterian Board of Publication
Henry Holt & Company

Review of Reviews
Harper & Bros.
George H. Doran Company
Fleming H. Revell Company
The Bobbs-Merrill Company
The Christian Herald

W. R. Caldwell, and many others.

We especially refer you in reference to the execution of work of the most exacting character to Oxford University Press; Encyclopaedia Britannica; International Textbook Company; Doubleday, Page & Company; and Henry Holt & Company.

Best equipped House in New York for Composition, Presswork, and Binding.
Our equipment consists of Linotype and Monotype machines, Job, Flat-Bed, Harris, and Web presses.

Send us your manuscript and we will produce a finished product satisfactory to the most exacting client.

WE SOLICIT

ADVANCE ORDERS

FOR any new book announced for publication. We are able to supply the new books of all publishers promptly on the day of publication, or frequently a day or two in advance to allow for shipments to distant points. Our discounts and terms are most liberal and will be found to be the lowest for all parts of the United States. One trial order will convince you.

Reference List of New Publications

Recorded in DECEMBER, 1914

This Reference List enters the books recorded during the month under (1) author, in Clarendon type, anonymous books having Clarendon type for the first word; (2) title in Roman; (3) subject-heading in SMALL CAPS; (4) name of series in Italics.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederick; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas. W: William.

For books received sizes are given in CAPS, Q, O, D, etc., books not received sizes are given in Roman numerals, 4°, 8° 12°, etc. Prices are added except when not supplied by publisher or obtainable only on specific request. Where not specified the binding is cloth.

Those desiring to learn the entire publishing output of the month in any one field should look under one of the following MAIN HEADINGS:

PHILOSOPHY	MEDICINE	LITERATURE
RELIGION AND THEOLOGY	AGRICULTURE	POETRY
SOCIOLOGY	HOUSEHOLD ECONOMICS	DRAMA
LAW	BUSINESS	FICTION
EDUCATION	ENGINEERING, TECHNOLOGY	BIOGRAPHY
PHILOLOGY	FINE ARTS	GEOGRAPHY AND TRAVEL
SCIENCE	GAMES, SPORTS, AMUSEMENTS	HISTORY

Besides the titles listed under each of these headings cross reference is made from each to a limited number of cognate headings which collectively give all the new publications of the month in the given subject or group of subjects.

Inquirers looking for books on a specific topic should look under the general subject to which that topic belongs, i.e. GEOLOGY rather than SILURIAN PERIOD; MATHEMATICS rather than CALCULUS; ECONOMICS rather than WAGES. Books regarding specific Religious denominations, countries and persons, however, should still be sought for under their individual names.

The Ragged Messenger

By W. B. Maxwell

WE offer THE RAGGED MESSENGER as even better than THE DEVIL'S GARDEN. Mr. Maxwell has imbued it with the idealism of The Servant in the House and The Passing of the Third Floor Back, the Christ spirit incarnate again amid the crowds and tumult of the modern world. It teaches the timely gospel of humanity, and the force and beauty of its message are not to be denied. It has the stirring action and rapid movement of The Devil's Garden, its characters belong to a more interesting class, and the personal drama is worked out in scenes at least as intense and absorbing as those that made that famous. There were some who brought against The Devil's Garden the charge that it was salacious. The publishers had no sympathy with this detraction, but certainly no stretch of the imagination can read into THE RAGGED MESSENGER the faintest trace of a salacious taint.
